

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

PUBLISHERS' NOTICE

THE unusual delay in the publication of THE AMERICAN LEGAL DIRECTORY for the current year has been caused by war conditions. Again and again, we have been obliged to revise our lists owing to changes due to the military draft and kindred reasons. We trust this explanation will be satisfactory to our subscribers and the general public.

THE AMERICAN LEGAL DIRECTORY is now an institution, and we shall do all in our power to make it worthy of its name and purposes.

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE LAWS

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION.

Marriage is the oldest and most universal of all human institutions. According to the Chinese Annals in the beginning of society men differed in nothing from other animals in their way of life. They wandered up and down the forests and plains free from the restraint of community laws or morality, and holding their women in common. Children generally knew their mothers, but rarely their fathers.

We are told that the Emperor Fou-hi changed all this by inventing marriage. The Egyptians credit Menes with the same invention, while the Greeks give the honor to Kekrops.

In the Sanscrit literature we find no definite account of the institution of marriage, but the Indian poem, "Mahabharata," relates that until the Prince Swetapetu issued an edict requiring fidelity between husband and wife the Indian women roved about at their pleasure, and if in their youthful innocence they went astray from their husbands they were not considered as guilty of any wrong.

The Bible story of the institution of marriage is contained in the Second Chapter of Genesis, 18th to the 25th verse. It is not within the purpose of this treatise to argue for or against the acceptance of the Bible narrative, so we call attention without comment to the extreme simplicity of the wedding ritual as stated in the 22d verse:

"And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and he brought her unto the man."

Among primitive men marriage was concluded without civil or religious ceremony. Even in modern Japan a wedding ritual is considered all but superfluous.

Marriage and Divorce Laws

The principal marriage ceremonies have been derived from heathen customs; they were: the arrhos, or espousal gifts, an earnest or pledge that marriage would be concluded; and the ring betokening fidelity.

Among the ancient Hebrews marriage was not a religious ordinance or contract, and neither in the Old Testament nor in the Talmud is it treated as such.

As with the Mohammedans it was simply a civil contract.

Under the old Roman law there were three modes of marriage: 1. Confarreatio, which consisted of a religious ceremony before ten witnesses, in which an ox was sacrificed and a wheaten cake was broken by a priest and divided between the parties.

2. Coemptio in manum, which was a conveyance or fictitious sale of the woman to the man.

3. Usus, the acquisition of a wife by prescription through her cohabitation with the husband for one year without being absent from his house three consecutive nights.

But a true Roman marriage could be concluded simply by the interchange of consent.

There was an easy morality of the olden times which according to present standards was akin to savagery. The Greeks even in the golden age of Pericles held the marriage relation in very little sanctity. It was reputable for men to loan their wives to their friends and divorce was easy and frequent. Hellenic literature attempted to make poetry of vice and martial infidelity, and adultery was the chief pastime of the gods and goddesses.

The Romans had more of the moral and religious in their character than the Greeks, but still we read of Cato the younger loaning his wife Marcia to Hortensius and taking her back after the orator's death.

In the Second Chapter of the Gospel according to St. John we find that Jesus was a guest at a marriage in Cana of Galilee. His attendance at the wedding feast is not notable for His having on this occasion given the marriage contract the character of a sacrament, for nothing in the record even hints at this. The account is principally noteworthy as the history of His first miracle, that of turning water into wine.

It was from the Fifth Chapter of the Epistle of St. Paul to the Ephesians that the dogma that marriage is a sacrament was gradually evolved. In this chapter the Apostle points out the particular duties of the marriage status, and exhorts wives to obey their husbands, and husbands to love their wives. "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh."

However, the early Christian Church did not treat marriage as a sacrament, although its celebration was usually the occasion of prayers and exhortations.

It was not until the year 1563, by an edict of the Council of Trent, that the oldest branch of the Christian Church, namely, that governed by the See of Rome, required the celebration of marriage to be an essentially religious ceremony.

The general marriage law of the European continent has been derived and developed from the edicts of the Roman emperors and the decrees of the Christian Church. This historical evolution is strikingly apparent when we read the definition of marriage as given in the Institutes of Justinian: Nuptiae autem, sive matrimonium est veri eta mulieris conjunctio, individuum vitae consuetudinem continens. Marriage is the union of a man and a woman, including an inseparable association of their lives.

There are as many definitions of marriage as there are views concerning it, but none of them improve very much upon that given in the Institutes.

It is also worth noting that the impediments to lawful marriage were very nearly the same under the Roman Empire as they are today in most civilized countries. The 18th Chapter of the Book of Leviticus appears to have set the standard. There are three principal forms of marriage, namely, monogamy, polygamy and polyandry. Monogamy, or the condition of one man being married to but one woman at a time, appears to be not only the best but the most ancient and universal type. It was, according to the Bible, good enough for the first husband, Adam, for his only wife was Eve. The first polygamist on the same authority was Lamech, who was of the sixth generation after Adam, for he "took unto him two wives." Reading in the First Book of Kings, we are informed that King Solomon had "seven hundred wives, princesses and three hundred concubines." A round thousand. However, polygamy, or the marriage of a man to more than one wife at the same time, was not the rule even among the ancient Hebrews. Such a trial was left to kings and other luxurious persons.

Polyandry is the condition of a woman having more than one husband at the same time. It evidently had its origin in unfertile regions in the endeavor to limit the population to the resources of the district. It is almost a thing of the past, but it is still practised in Thibet, Ceylon and some parts of India.

MORGANATIC MARRIAGE.—A morganatic marriage is a marriage between a member of a reigning or nominally reigning family and one who is not of either of such families. It is a term usually employed with reference to a matrimonial alliance between a man of royal blood (or in Germany of high nobility) and a woman of inferior rank.

Such alliances are sometimes called "left-handed marriages," because in the wedding ceremony the left hand is given instead of the right.

In Germany a woman of high rank may make a morganatic alliance with a man of inferior position. The children of a morganatic marriage are legitimate, but neither they nor the wife can inherit the rank or estate of the morganatic husband.

By the Royal Marriage Act of England such an alliance has no matrimonial effect whatever.

DIVORCE.—Divorce is almost as ancient as marriage, and just as fully sanctioned by history, necessity and authority. In the 24th Chapter of Deuteronomy we read:

"When a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favor in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her, then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house. And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife." This rule was consistent with the patriarchal system of the Jewish commonwealth. The husband as the head of the family could divorce his wife at his pleasure. An illustration of such a divorce is furnished by Abraham's dismissal or divorcement of Hagar. This was surely a simple divorce law with a summary procedure, much cheaper, quicker and easier than is given by the statutes of several American States. No solicitor, barrister or court was required. The husband constituted himself president of the Court of Probate, Admiralty and Divorce for the special occasion and granted himself a favorable decree. The law of divorce as stated in Deuteronomy continued to be accepted by the Hebrews until the 11th century. It was in full force when Christ was on earth, for it is recorded in the 19th Chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew that He was questioned concerning it. Jesus had given to the Pharisees His views of marriage in answer to their question: "Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every reason?" He then stated the proposition that because of marriage a man shall leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and added: "What, therefore, God hath joined together let not man put asunder."

Then was put to Him the question concerning the existing law: "Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and put her away?" His answer was that "Moses, because of the hardness of your hearts, suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so."

Jesus although disapproving of the breadth of the Mosaic law did not declare against divorce; quite the contrary, for He said: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery."

Unless we assume that Jesus was concealing rather than expounding His views, the plain meaning is that He considered fornication to be the sufficient and only cause for an absolute divorce.

Josephus interpreted the Jewish divorce law as follows: "He who wishes to be separated from his wife for any reason whatever—and many such are occurring among men—must affirm in writing his intention of no longer cohabiting with her.”

Marriage and Divorce Laws

The ancient Jewish law made of woman a chattel and a marriage derelict at her husband's pleasure, but it gave the woman no right to divorce her husband for any cause.

The poet, John Milton, in the least worthy of his writings, relied upon the Mosaic law in his specious argument in favor of unlimited divorce.

St. Augustine contended that the question of divorce is not clearly determined by the words of Jesus, but there can be no mistake concerning the theological attitude of the Roman Catholic Church of today on this subject. It positively holds that no human power can dissolve a marriage when ratified and consummated between baptized persons.

If one is prepared to concede the principal dogma of Roman Catholicism, namely, the infallibility of the Church, there is no lack of logic or authority in such an attitude, even though it differs or varies from the Mosaic law or the sayings of Jesus.

We must remember, however, that modern divorce law is not founded on theological dogmas or theories, but upon practical social science and humanity.

In most countries there is no distinction between the husband and the wife as to grounds of divorce. The Mohammedan law of Egypt and the statute laws of Belgium and England being conspicuous exceptions to the rule. Usually the domicile of the husband is the place where the action must be instituted, but in the United States of America a wife may acquire a separate domicile from that of her husband if he has given her cause for divorce.

Divorces of domiciled foreigners are granted in several countries of Europe, provided the cause relied on is a cause for divorce in the native country of the parties, and in most continental countries divorces of natives are granted, whether domiciled in their native country or not, the foundation of jurisdiction being nationality, not domicile. Practically in all countries the exercise of jurisdiction for divorce is not affected by the fact that marriage was celebrated in or out of the country.

Introduction

The causes for divorce are varied in kind and in number. In some countries of Europe mutual consent is a sufficient cause under certain restrictions. The number of causes for divorce in Europe vary from one in England to twelve in Sweden.

The dream of the academic lawyer is for an international law of marriage and divorce, but the differences between the existing judicial systems of the various great commonwealths of the world are much too great to make a universal law on the subject practicable. In one country only the civil marriage is legal and in another only the ecclesiastical alliance is valid; in one country divorce is allowed, and in another it is denied; in one, difference in religion between the parties is an impediment to marriage, and in another it is not; in one the canon law is controlling, and in another the civil law regulates all questions of matrimonial rights. Even in the matter of age and capacity the greatest variableness exists. As, for instance, the minimum age for marriage. In England it is fourteen for males and fifteen for females; in Germany, twenty-one for males and sixteen for females; in Austria, fourteen for both; in Russia, France, Holland, Switzerland and Hungary, eighteen for males and sixteen for females; in Spain and Greece, fourteen for males and fifteen for females; in Denmark and Norway, twenty for males and fourteen for females; in Sweden, twenty-one for males and seventeen for females; in Finland, twenty-one for males and fifteen for females; in Servia, seventeen for males and fifteen for females.

It will be observed that the different laws as to the minimum age for marriage do not flow from circumstances of climate, religion or culture, but are mainly historical and arbitrary.

CHAPTER II.

ENGLAND.

INTRODUCTION.—The law of England regards marriage as a contract, a status and an institution. As a contract it is in its essence an expressed consent on the part of a man and woman, competent to make the contract, to cohabit with each other as husband and wife, and with each other only. As Lord Robertson says: "It differs from other contracts in this, that the rights, obligations or duties arising from it are not left entirely to be regulated by the agreement of parties, but are to a certain extent matters of municipal regulation, over which the parties have no control by any declaration of their will."

As a status created by contract, marriage confers on the parties certain privileges and exacts certain duties under legal protection and sanction.

From the earliest period of the recorded history of England it has always been accepted doctrine that marriage as an institution is the keystone of the commonwealth and the highest expression of morality.

The men of the law in England were anciently persons in holy orders, and the judges were originally bishops, abbots, deans, canons and archdeacons. As late as 1857 the clergy in their ecclesiastical courts had exclusive jurisdiction of matrimonial causes. They administered the Canon Law of the Western Church affecting marriage and ruled that in marriages lawfully made, and according to the ordinance of matrimony, the bond thereof can by no means be dissolved during the lives of the parties.

By the passage of the Divorce Act of 1857 the jurisdiction in matrimonial causes was transferred to a new civil tribunal, and absolute divorce was sanctioned, with permission of remarriage on proof of adultery on the part of the wife, or adultery and cruelty on the part of the husband.

It is seriously contended by some eminent churchmen that in spite of this legislation the Church of England still has as its definite existing law the old rule which obtained before the Reformation, namely, that marriage is indissoluble; that a limited divorce from bed and board may be permitted, but that an absolute divorce which leaves either party free to remarry during the lifetime of the other is forbidden. This supposed conflict between the civil and ecclesiastical laws of the realm furnishes an academic topic and engenders bad feeling, but it has no real existence.

The Church of England exists by Act of Parliament and manifestly has no power to nullify statutes enacted by the legislature which established it as the official religious organization of the Kingdom.

The civil courts of England have never considered marriage as a sacrament or religious ordinance, but have held that the dogmas and precepts of Christianity do not affect the civil status of marriage, but simply add to it a religious character. In this respect the law of England is in exact harmony with the attitude of the primitive Christian Church.

Lord Stowell tells us that 'in the Christian Church marriage was elevated in a later age to the dignity of a sacrament, in consequence of its divine institution, and of some expressions of high and mysterious import concerning it contained in sacred writings. The law of the Church, the canon law (a system which, in spite of its absurd pretensions to a higher origin, is in many of its provisions deeply enough founded in the wisdom of man), although in conformity to the prevailing theological opinion, it revered marriage as a sacrament, still so far respected its natural and civil origin as to consider that where the natural and civil contract was formed it had the full essence of matrimony without the intervention of the priest, it had even in that state the character of a sacrament; for it is a misapprehension to suppose that this intervention was required as a matter of necessity even for that purpose before the Council of Trent."

Marriage and Divorce Laws

The English courts only recognize as a true marriage one which, in addition to being valid in other respects, involves the essential requirement that it is a voluntary union of one man and one woman for life to the exclusion of all others, which is substantially the definition of marriage given by Lord Penzance in the leading case of Hyde v. Hyde.

No marriage is recognized which is founded on principles which are in conflict with the general morality of Christendom. The term Christendom is used as a matter of convenience only. It includes all those nations generally recognized to be civilized, whatever may be their prevailing religion.

LEX LOCI CONTRACTUS.—It is a well-established rule that the law of the place where the contract of marriage was concluded, that is, the lex loci contractus, or, as it is sometimes termed, the lex loci celebrationis (law of the place of celebration), alone governs the court in ascertaining whether or not the marriage is regular. All the formal preliminaries, such as publication of banns, or license, and consent of the parties entitled to give or withhold consent according to the lex loci contractus, must be complied with.

LEGAL AGE.—The legal age for marriage in England and Wales is fourteen for a male and twelve for a female. The consent of the father of each of the contracting parties is required of those under twenty-one. If the father is dead the consent of the mother is required unless there is a guardian appointed by the father.

FORMAL REQUIREMENTS.—There are certain formal preliminaries to a valid marriage in England, such as the publication of banns, or the procurement of a common or special license which operates as a dispensation with the banns.

BANNS.—The banns must be published on three Sundays in the parish in which the parties reside, and if they reside in different parishes the banns must be published in each parish. The marriage ceremony must be celebrated in one of the churches where the banns have been published. If they are published in two different parishes the clergyman of one parish must give a certificate of publication, which must be delivered to the clergyman who solemnizes the marriage.

England

The parties must reside in the parish for fifteen days prior to the publication of the banns, and the marriage must take place within three months of the last publication. Where a man has procured the banns to be published in false names, or has concealed his true name, he will not be allowed to annul the marriage on that account only. A party cannot take advantage of his own fraud for the purpose of invalidating a marriage.

LICENSE.—No publication of banns is necessary in the case of a marriage under a bishop's license. Licenses may be obtained at the offices of the bishop's registrars, and full information as to procuring a license may be obtained through the local clergy. A license granted by a bishop is only available in his diocese, and one of the parties must have resided for fifteen days immediately preceding the issue of the license in the parish in which the marriage is to take place. The cost varies in different dioceses, but it is usually between £2 and £3. The Archbishop of Canterbury has power to issue a special license enabling a marriage to be solemnized at any time or place. The cost of this is from £20 to £30, and it can be obtained at the Faculty Office, Doctors' Commons, London, E.C.

CERTIFICATE OF REGISTRAR.—A marriage by the certificate of the registrar of marriages may take place at a Roman Catholic place of worship, a Non-conformist chapel, or at the office of the registrar of marriages. The parties must have resided in the district at least seven days preceding the date of the notice, which must be given to the superintendent registrar, or, if they live in different districts, then notice must be given to the superintendent registrar of each district, and it must be exhibited in his office for twenty-one days. If no valid objection to the marriage is made the superintendent registrar issues his certificate and the marriage may take place within three months. The cost, including certificate, is 9s. 7d.

REGISTRAR'S LICENSE.—A marriage by registrar's license may take place either at his office or at a Roman Catholic or Non-conformist place of worship. Notice must be given by one of the parties to the superintendent registrar of the district in which he or she has resided for at least fifteen days, and he will then issue his license at the expiration of one day. The marriage can then immediately take place, or it may take place any time within three months. The cost is £2 14s. 6d.

No marriage license will be issued to parties, either of whom is under twenty-one years of age, unless one of the parties makes oath that the consent of the proper persons has been obtained, or that there is no person alive whose consent would ordinarily be necessary.

A marriage may be legally concluded without a marriage license if banns are duly published.

HOURS FOR MARRIAGE.—Marriages can only be solemnized between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., except in the case of marriages by special license and Jewish marriages.

FALSE NAMES.—Where both parties conspire to procure banns to be published in a false name or names or to practise a fraud with the object of obtaining a license the marriage may be annulled, but if the one party only is guilty the marriage will be valid.

MARRIAGE BY REPUTATION.—In most cases it is necessary to produce clear evidence of a marriage ceremony, but in some exceptional instances a marriage may be proved by long reputation—e. g., if two persons have lived together as man and wife for many years, and if they have always been regarded as such by their and neighbors, the Court will presume a legal marriage unless evidence is produced to prove that the parties were not lawfully married.

CERTIFICATES OF MARRIAGES—MARRIAGE LINES.—A marriage certificate (marriage lines) can be obtained at the time of the marriage for 2s. 7d. If applied for subsequently the cost will be 3s. 7d. A certificate can be obtained at the church, chapel, synagogue or meeting house where the ceremony was performed, or at the General Register Office, Somerset House, or at the office of the superintendent registrar of the district where the marriage took place. The entry in the register at either of these places may be inspected on payment of 1s. A certificate of a marriage entered into in England or Wales prior to July 1, 1837, should be obtainable either from the registrar general or from the church where it was solemnized.

- 29—30 Husband's Brother's Son, Husband's Sister's Son (nephew by affinity).

GROUNDS OR CAUSES FOR DIVORCE.—A husband is entitled to a divorce if his wife has committed adultery, but a wife is not so entitled unless her husband has committed in incestuous adultery, bigamy, rape, sodomy, bestiality, adultery coupled with cruelty, or adultery coupled with desertion without reasonable excuse for two years or more. Incestuous adultery is adultery with a woman within the prohibited degrees.

A wife will not be granted a decree of divorce on the ground of her husband's adultery coupled with cruelty unless the cruelty relied on consists of bodily hurt or injury to health, or a reasonable danger or apprehension of one or the other of them. There must be at least two acts of cruelty on the part of the husband.

The communication of venereal disease when the husband knows of his condition is an act of cruelty.

PROCEDURE.—The application for a divorce is made by a petition to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice.

The party seeking relief is called the petitioner and the party against whom the petition is brought is called the respondent. The party with whom a husband alleges his wife has committed adultery is called the co-respondent. The person with whom a wife alleges her husband has committed adultery is not a party to the suit. However, a woman implicated in a divorce suit may, upon proper application, secure an order permitting her to attend the proceedings as an intervener.

Divorce proceedings in England are very expensive; the costs in an ordinary uncontested suit amount to from thirty to forty pounds sterling.

A petitioner or respondent who is not worth twenty-five pounds after payment of his or her debts, exclusive of wearing apparel, may sue or defend in forma pauperis. A person whose income exceeds one pound a week cannot, except in special cases, sue or defend in forma pauperis. A party desiring to sue or defend in forma pauperis must as a preliminary measure prepare a written statement of his or her case, setting forth the facts relied upon as a cause of action or defence, and obtain thereon an endorsed opinion of a barrister-at-law setting forth his professional opinion that the cause of action or defense as stated is good in law. The applicant must then make an affidavit, attaching the statement and the barrister's opinion. This affidavit is then filed in the Divorce Registry of Somerset House, where two days later, if a proper case is made out, an order is issued granting the applicant leave to sue or defend in forma pauperis. No fees are charged in respect to this application nor upon the subsequent proceedings in court. No solicitor or barrister is assigned to the party proceeding in this form.

JURISDICTION.—The Court will only entertain jurisdiction when the husband is domiciled in England. If the husband is temporarily residing abroad an action by him or his wife for divorce must be instituted in England.

The English Courts do not recognize a change of domicile which is obtained simply to enable the parties to obtain a divorce in another country, the laws of which offer greater facilities.

If the domicile of the husband is in England, and either the husband or the wife obtains a decree of divorce in the United States of America or elsewhere, the English courts will treat such a divorce as a nullity. A person's domicile is his or her permanent home. An Englishman who lives in America for twenty-five years is not domiciled there unless by all the facts his conduct shows that he has abandoned his English domicile.

CONDONATION.—A matrimonial offence which is a sufficient cause for divorce may be condoned or forgiven by the spouse aggrieved, and such condonation is a good defence to the action. But subsequent misconduct will revive the offence as if there had been no condonation.

CONNIVANCE.—It is a sufficient defence to an action for divorce for the respondent to show that the adultery complained of was committed by the connivance or active consent of the petitioner.

COLLUSION.—Collusion is the illegal agreement and co-operation between the petitioner and the respondent in a divorce action to obtain a judicial dissolution of the marriage.

FORM OF DIVORCE DECREES.—An English decree of divorce is in the first instance nisi, or provisional. If after six months it is unaffected by any intervention by the King's Proctor, or any other person, it can be made absolute upon proper application.

KING'S PROCTOR.—This is the proctor or solicitor representing the Crown in the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice in matrimonial causes.

Marriage and Divorce Laws

In his official capacity he can only intervene in a divorce suit on the ground of collusion.

Sir James Hannen, discussing the powers of this officer said in a leading case; "If, then, the information given to the King's Proctor before the decree nisi does not rise to a suspicion of collusion, but only brings to his knowledge matters material to the due decision of the case, he is not entitled to take any step, and the direction of the Attorney-General would probably be that he should watch the case to see if these material facts are brought to the notice of the court. If at the trial they should be, there will be no need for the King's Proctor to do anything more, for he would not be entitled to have the same charges tried over again unless material facts were not brought to the notice of the court.

"If, however, those material facts are not so brought to the notice of the court by the parties, he will then be entitled as one of the public, but still acting under the direction of the Attorney-General, to show cause against the decree being made absolute."

In special cases the court has power to make the decree absolute before the expiration of six months after the decree nisi.

Until the decree is made absolute neither party can lawfully contract another marriage; and in the event of the suit being contested the parties must further wait until the time for an appeal has passed.

ALIMONY, TEMPORARY AND PERMANENT.—During the pendency of the suit the husband is liable to provide his wife with alimony or maintenance. The amount granted is within the court's discretion, but generally it is about twenty-five per centum of the husband's income. Upon the granting of a decree in the wife's favor the court has power to grant the wife permanent alimony, the amount of which depends on all the facts, such as the husband's income, the wife's means and the social status of the parties. If a wife secures an order for alimony against her husband, he being a man of property, the court may require him to give security for its payment or direct him to make a transfer of money to a trustee or trustees for the convenient payment to the wife. Permanent alimony is usually smaller than temporary alimony, or alimony pendente lite, but no rule as to the amount can be safely stated, it resting in the discretion of the Court.

If a husband has no considerable property he will be directed to pay the alimony awarded against him in monthly or weekly instalments.

INSANITY.—Insanity is neither a cause nor a bar to divorce. If an insane wife commits adultery, or if an insane husband commits adultery coupled with the other offences which make out a cause of action against him, the innocent party is entitled to a decree of divorce. So an insane party may be a petitioner for divorce, but can only appear by his or her committee in lunacy.

HUSBAND'S NAME.—A divorced wife is entitled to continue to use her former husband's surname.

ANNULMENT OF MARRIAGE.—An action for the annulment of marriage has for its purpose the setting aside of the marriage contract on the theory that proper consent to the marriage has never been given by both the parties.

The following are the causes or grounds for such annulment:

1. A prior and existing marriage of one of the parties;
2. Impotency, or such physical malformation of one of the parties which prevents him or her from consummating the marriage by sexual intercourse;
3. Relationship within the prohibited degrees;
4. Marriage procured by fraud, violence or mistake;
5. Insanity of one of the parties at the time of the marriage;
6. Marriage performed without legal license, or without the required publication of banns.

JUDICIAL SEPARATION.—By the Matrimonial Causes Act a decree of judicial separation, which is equivalent in effect to a divorce a mensa et thoro under the old law, may be obtained either by the husband or wife on the ground of adultery, or cruelty, or desertion without legal cause for two years and upwards.

The defences which may be set up by the respondent vary according to the cause relied upon by the petitioner, but there is one absolute bar in suits for judicial separations brought on any ground, and that is that the petitioner has committed adultery since the date of the marriage.

SEPARATION ORDERS.—Besides the ordinary suit to obtain a judicial separation which must be prosecuted in the High Court a wife can obtain speedy and inexpensive relief by making an application to a police magistrate, or a board of magistrates, for a separation order. This remedy is limited to married women whose husbands are domiciled in England or Wales.

Such separation orders are intended to furnish summary relief to the wives of workingmen, and the amount awarded for the wife's support to be paid by her husband cannot exceed two pounds a week, no matter what the husband's income may be.

The following are the causes for which, upon application, a magistrate or board of magistrates is authorized to grant a separation order:

1. Habitual drunkenness of the husband, which renders him at times dangerous to himself or others, or incapable of managing himself or his affairs;
2. When the husband has been convicted of an aggravated assault upon his wife, or has been convicted by an Assize or Quarter Sessions Court of an assault and has been sentenced to a fine of more than five pounds or to imprisonment for more than two months;
3. Desertion by the husband of his wife;
4. Persistent cruelty of the husband toward his wife;
5. Neglect to provide reasonable maintenance for wife or infant children.

By the Licensing Act of 1902 a husband is entitled to a separation order by a magistrate or board of magistrates if his wife is an habitual drunkard.

RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS.—Husbands and wives are entitled to each other's society, and if, without sufficient reason, either of them neglects to perform his or her obligations the injured party may institute what is known as a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, in which the court will grant a decree directing the offending party to render conjugal rights to the other party. If the decree is not complied with, such non-compliance is equivalent to desertion, and a suit for judicial separation may be instituted immediately. If the husband is the offending party, and if he has been guilty of adultery, a suit for divorce may at once be instituted; or if he commits adultery subsequently to the date of the decree for restitution, proceedings for divorce may be taken. Furthermore, if the suit for restitution is brought by the wife, the husband may be directed to make such periodical payments for her benefit as the court may think just. If the suit for restitution is brought by the husband, and if the wife is entitled to any property, the court may order a settlement for the whole or part of it for the benefit of the husband and children of the marriage, or either or any of them, or may order the wife to pay a portion of her earnings to the husband for his own benefit, or to some other person for the benefit of the children of the marriage. A husband cannot compel his wife to live with him by force, and if he seizes and retains possession of her, she or her relatives can obtain a habeas corpus to compel him to release her, but persons who wrongfully induce a wife to leave her husband, or who detain her from his society by improper means, are liable to an action for damages by him. If a husband declines to live with his wife because he discovers that she has been unchaste before marriage she cannot obtain a decree for restitution of conjugal rights unless he knew of the fact before the marriage took place. If a husband has been guilty of cruelty he cannot obtain a decree for restitution.

FOREIGN MARRIAGES.—The Foreign Marriage Act of 1892 (55 and 56 Vict. c. 23) forms a complete code upon the subject of the marriage of British subjects abroad.

Its chief requirement is that one at least of the parties to the marriage must be a British subject.

Notice of the proposed marriage must be given fourteen days before the ceremony, and it must be performed before one of the following officials, who is termed in the Act a "marriage officer": the British ambassador, minister or chargé-d'affairs, accredited to the country where the marriage takes place; the British consul, governor, high commissioner, or official resident. The term consul in the Act includes a consul-general, a vice-consul, pro-consul, or consular agent.

If the woman is a British subject, and the man is a subject or citizen of another country, the marriage officer must be satisfied that the intended marriage would be recognized by the laws of the country where the man to be married belongs.

In 1896 there was passed the Marriage with Foreigners Act (6 Edw. 7, 3. 40), which is intended to protect British subjects who contract marriages with subjects or citizens of other countries, either at home or abroad, and to run the risk of having their marriages treated as invalid by the law of the country of the foreign contracting party. It provides for the granting of certificates by competent authority in the country to which the foreign party to the marriage owes allegiance, stating that there is no lawful impediment to the proposed marriage.

CONFLICT OF LAWS—English courts do not recognize a decree of divorce granted by the courts of a foreign country as having any effect outside of the country where granted, unless at the time of the beginning of the action which resulted in the decree both parties were domiciled within the jurisdiction of the court which granted it.

This rule applies to divorce decrees obtained in Scotland because for all the purposes of private international law Scotland is a foreign country.

The English courts will, however, recognize as possessing extra-territorial validity a decree of divorce which is recognized as valid by the courts of the country where the parties were actually domiciled at the time of its being granted.

In the case of Gillig v. Gillig, decided in 1906, the English High Court recognized as valid in England a divorce granted in South Dakota, U. S. A., of parties domiciled in New York, because the decree in question was recognized as valid by the courts of the State of New York. It is the doctrine of English courts that an honest adherence to the principle that domicile alone gives jurisdiction in a divorce action will preclude the scandal which arises when a man and woman are held to be husband and wife in one country and strangers in another.

CHAPTER III.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

The United States as such, that is, in its Federal capacity, has no single system of marriage and divorce laws applicable to all the States and Territories.

The purpose of the Constitution of the United States is to maintain by its federal structure a strong national government, while recognizing each of the States which make up the federation to be so far as is consistent with the motive of the Union, sovereign commonwealth.

When one considers this wonderful federation of States and Territories, with nearly half a hundred separate governments each making and interpreting its domestic laws, and yet all parts of, and working in harmony with, the central or Federal Government, the justice of Gladstone's tribute to the American Constitution as "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man" is apparent.

The laws of marriage and divorce in the various States and Territories cannot therefore be ascertained from a single legislative or judicial source. The law of the several jurisdictions consists not only of legislative enactments, but of judicial construction and interpretation of such legislation.

Fortunately the tendency is toward uniformity of legislation among the States especially on the important subject of marriage and divorce, and such differences as exist are pointed out substantially in this chapter when each State or Territory is considered separately.

The Congress, or national legislature, has power to legislate only upon such subjects as the Federal Constitution marks out for it, and all powers not granted to the Federal government remain with the several States.

Marriage and Divorce Laws

The regulation of marriage and divorce is one of the most important domestic concerns which—remains within the jurisdiction of a State.

Article IV., Section 3, of the Constitution of the United States, expressly grants to Congress exclusive power to prescribe laws for the Territories of the United States.

Just as each State has a separate judicial system so the Federal Government has its separate courts, which have no power to interfere with the proceedings or judgments of the State courts unless some principle of the Federal Constitution or a national law is challenged.

ESSENTIALS TO MARRIAGE.—There are three requisites to a lawful marriage in all of the States and Territories of the United States. There are:

1. First, that the marriage is mnogamous. That is, the Federal courts and the courts of the several States only recognize as a true marriage one which in addition to being valid in other respects is a voluntary union of one man and one woman for life to the exclusion of all others.

2. The parties must be competent according to the lex loci contractus, or the law where the contract was concluded.

3. There must be free consent on the part of both of the contracting parties.

INTERSTATE COMITY.—As Wharton points out in his "Conflict of Laws," marriage is not merely a contract but an international institution of Christendom.

Often complications arise out of some difference between the law of marriage and divorce in the State where a marriage is concluded, or a divorce effected, and the law of the State where one or both of the parties may after the marriage or divorce acquire a domicile. The guiding rule in such cases is that if a marriage or divorce is valid in the State or Territory where it was concluded or effected, it is valid in all of the State and Territories of the United States.

United States

PROOF OF MARRIAGE.—There are various methods of proving the existence of a marriage.

Where the parties live together ostensibly as husband and wife, demeaning themselves toward each other as such, and are received into society and treated by their friends and relations as having and being entitled to that status, the law will, in favor of morality and decency, presume that they have been legally married. This is the rule accepted with but slight qualifications in all of the States. The cohabitation of the parties coupled with the general reputation of being husband and wife is, however, at the best prima facie evidence sufficient for the purposes of a civil suit. In criminal prosecutions for adultery or bigamy, marriage is a necessary ingredient of the offence, and must be directly established.

PROOF OF MARRIAGES ABROAD.—In the absence of special statutes requiring a marriage abroad, or in another State to be proven in a particular manner, a foreign marriage can only be established by authenticated copies of the original records, or by proving as a matter of fact what the legal requirements for marriage are in the other country or State, together with proof that such requirements have been complied with. Of course, it is always necessary to identify the parties to any record.

CONSANGUINITY AND AFFINITY.—By an Act of Congress applicable to all the Territories marriage within and including the fourth degree of consanguinity computed according to the civil law is forbidden. This is with but slight variation the rule adopted by each of the States.

SOURCES OF LAW.—The laws of marriage in the several States and Territories originate from the law on that subject as it existed in England at the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution, as subsequently modified by State legislation and local judicial interpretation.

The law of divorce as it exists in the several States is entirely of local creation.

In the remainder of this chapter each State and Territory of the United States and the District of Columbia is considered separately.

NEW YORK.

MARRIAGE.—Marriage is a civil contract, to which the consent of the parties capable in law of making the contract is essential. Minors become capable of contracting marriage upon completing their eighteenth year of age. A marriage is void from the time its nullity is declared by a court of competent jurisdiction if either party thereto was under the age of eighteen at the time it was concluded.

IMPEDIMENTS.—Marriage between an ancestor and a descendant, between a brother and sister, of either the whole or half blood, between an uncle and niece, or an aunt and nephew, whether the relations are legitimate or illegitimate, is incestuous and void.

The defeated party in an action of divorce against whom a decree has been granted on the grounds of adultery is prohibited from marrying again during the lifetime of the successful party. However, the court which granted the decree has power so to modify it as to permit such marriage after five years.

COMMON LAW MARRIAGE.—By an act which became effective April 12, 1901, the law of New York has required a contract of marriage to be signed by the parties and witnesses acknowledged and recorded. Since that time a "common law" marriage, or one established simply by cohabitation and reputation, has not been recognized.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.—The legislature of New York, at its session in 1907, passed an act providing for marriage licenses, which became effective January 1, 1908.

Written consent of both parents or guardian must be given to the town or city clerk before he may issue license. If residents of the State, they must personally appear and execute the consent; if non-residents, it must be executed, acknowledged and certified.

Marriage and Divorce Laws

WHO MAY SOLEMNIZE MARRIAGE.—A clergyman or minister of any religion, or the leader, or the two assistant leaders, of the Society for Ethical Culture in New York City, justices and judges of courts of record, judges of the county courts, justices of the peace, mayors, recorders and aldermen of cities.

MARRIAGE BY CONTRACT.—A lawful marriage may be concluded by a written contract of marriage signed by both parties, and at least two witnesses who shall subscribe the same, stating the place of residence of each of the parties and witnesses and the date and place of marriage, and acknowledged by the parties and witnesses in the manner required for the acknowledgment of a conveyance of real estate to entitle the same to be recorded. Such contract shall be filed, within six months after its execution, in the office of the clerk of the town or city in which the marriage was solemnized.

JEWES AND QUAKERS.—Marriages among Quakers or Jews may be solemnized in the manner and according to the regulations of their respective societies.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF MARRIAGE.—No marriage shall be deemed or adjudged invalid, nor shall the validity thereof be in any way affected on account of any want of authority in any person solemnizing the same, if consummated with a full belief on the part of the persons so married, or either of them, that they were lawfully joined in marriage.

DIVORCE.—The only cause for absolute divorce is the adultery of either party.

JURISDICTION.—The Supreme Court has exclusive original jurisdiction of actions for divorce.

In an action for absolute divorce, both parties must have been residents of the State when the offense was committed; or must have been married within the State; or the plaintiff must have been a resident when the offense was committed, and also when the action was commenced; or when the offense was committed within the State, the plaintiff must have been a resident when the action was commenced.

United States

LIMITED DIVORCE.—A limited divorce, which is equivalent to a judicial separation in England, may be granted because of:

1. The cruel and inhuman treatment of the plaintiff by the defendant.
2. Such conduct, on the part of the defendant toward the plaintiff, as may render it unsafe and improper for the latter to cohabit with the former.
3. The abandonment of the plaintiff by the defendant.
4. When the wife is plaintiff, the neglect or refusal of the defendant to provide for her.

In actions for limited divorce both parties must have been residents of the State when the action was commenced; or when the marriage took place within the State, the plaintiff must have been a resident thereof, when the action was commenced; or when the marriage took place out of the State, the parties must have become residents thereof, and have continued to be such at least one year, and the plaintiff must have been a resident when the action was commenced.

ANNULMENT OF MARRIAGE.—An action to procure a decree declaring the marriage contract void and annulling the marriage may be maintained on any of the following grounds:

1. When either party was under the age of legal consent.
2. When either party was an idiot or lunatic.
3. When either party was physically incapable of entering into the marriage state, and such incapacity continues, and is incurable.
4. When the consent of either party was obtained by force, duress or fraud.
5. When either party had a former wife or husband living, the formal marriage being in force.

By a woman plaintiff on the following grounds:

1. When the plaintiff had not attained the age of 16 years at the time of marriage.
2. When the marriage took place without the consent of the parent, guardian, or other person having legal charge of her.
3. Where it was not followed by consummation or cohabitation,

Marriage and Divorce Laws

and was not ratified after attaining the age of 16 years.

DEFENCES IN DIVORCE ACTIONS.—Divorce will not be granted for the cause of adultery.

1. When the offense alleged has been condoned or forgiven by plaintiff.

2. When the adultery was committed by the procurement, connivance, privity or consent of plaintiff.

3. If five years have elapsed since the plaintiff discovered the defendant's guilt.

4. If there is existing any decree of any competent of any State or Territory of the United States granting an absolute divorce to the defendant and against the plaintiff.

5. If it appears that the plaintiff has also committed adultery.

CUSTODY OF CHILDREN.—During the pendency of an action for divorce, or on final judgment, the court may give such directions as justice requires for the custody, care and education of any of the children of the marriage.

ALIMONY.—The court has power during the pendency of an action for divorce to grant a woman plaintiff or defendant such allowance out of her husband's estate as may be necessary and just for her support, and also that she may be able to procure counsel to prosecute or defend the suit in her behalf.

If the wife becomes successful in the action the court may in its discretion award her permanent alimony. The amount of alimony in all cases depends upon the wife's needs, her social status, and her husband's ability to make provision for her.

FORM OF DIVORCE DECREE.—Decrees are first entered nisi, or provisionally, and cannot become absolute until the expiration of three months after the entry of decree nisi.
